PARAGRAPHS CONCERNING MICHIGAN

(By Ed. A. Nowack.)
Lansing, Mich., Oct. 23. With the millions of dollars invested today in the sugar beet industry it is interesting to note that agricultural history in Michigan records that the legislature in 1881 tried to stimulate the home production of sugar through offering a bounty, but efforts to obtain crystalline sugar from the syrup of sorghum, or Chinese sugar cane were not successful, although considerable sorghum molasses was being produced at that time in Michigan.

Department of Agriculture estimates place horse population of Michigan at around the 700,000 mark. This state leads the union in the number of pure bred registered stallions. Horses are reported to have been introduced into Michigan by the early French, and were described as hardy, strong, of a quiet disposition and some of them quite speedy. An amalgamation of this type with early American breeds is said to have occurred. These early American horses were of moderate size (14 to 16 hands high) weighing 1,000 to 1,200 pounds. English thoroughbred stallions, crossed with native mares improved the strain and provided the carriage and driving horses of later days. About 1854 the Morgan and Black Hawk horses are said to have been introduced from New England along with the Hamiltonian and other trotting blood. About this period draught horse breeds entered the state. Then came Percherons from France, English Clydes and other types. By 1892 Belgians also were in evidence, Cleveland Bays and French coach horses had then arrived.

Persons who 15 or more years ago gave to the state great tracts of second growth timber land for military and forest reserves cannot now receive any departmental permission to lumber off the merchantable timber on such lands by a special act of the legislature can such a permission be granted. The question came up when Rasmus Hanson, donor of the major part of the Grayling Military reservation, asked extension of time to lumber off certain sections of the reserve he donated years ago. Mr. Hanson at that time donated 18,000 acres of land to the state for the reserve. After such donations no taxes are assessed the donor as the land belongs to the state. Some of the donors have harvested timber on such lands years after they ceased paying taxes thereon.

Days are more than 30 minutes longer in the upper peninsula of Michigan than the lower part of the southern peninsula. With the exceptions of portions of New York state, along the eastern end of Lake Erie, and the eastern portion of the lower peninsula of Michigan, there is less sunshine along the Lake Michigan shore than in any other section of the country.

Did you know that—
Christmas trees, if they are permitted to be sold by the state this year will have to be tagged the same as dogs to safeguard the stand of these trees on state owned land. In other words Christmas tree cutters will have to be licensed by the State Department of Conservation.

Michigan now ranks second in the union in the matter of forest fire protection measures employed. California is first, but the last season's tremendous losses are expected to put California in second place and boost Michigan to first.

Authorities on fish culture in Michigan inform the Department of Conservation the quicker frye are placed in the streams after hatching the sturdier they become and the lower will be the death rate.

Herman Lundeen, Lewiston, was the first man in Michigan to build a fire tower for forest fire protection. He gave this tower to the state and also the second forest fire protection tower he built. His first venture was a wooden tower, the second an all steel structure.

The proposed geological report under preparation on the mining industry in the state will cost $10,000 to print. It is claimed such a report is highly essential to the iron mining industry's future.

A three days' meeting of leading conservationists in the state is planned for Lansing in December when all phases of conservation will be discussed with a view of recommending helpful legislation.

The Erie duck marsh, said to be one of the finest in the world, originally was sold to private individuals by state authorities for the sickly sum of three cents an acre, according to John Baird, conservation director, who bitterly opposes acquisition of hunting and fishing tracts by any set of individuals.

The government is anxious to acquire 45,000 acres of tax land in Michigan for game preserve spots. Michigan officials are willing the transfer be made providing the hunting and fishing rights on the preserves remain in the right of the people to hunt and fish in season.

Government land and state owned land in Michigan is taxed five cents an acre for the purpose of highway construction.

For the first time in history clam fishermen of the Grand river have been notified from fishing while one clam fisherman was arrested and convicted on a larceny charge following a day's clam fishing. Those enjoined were clam hunting near Plainfield, Kent county.

ATTRactions ARE ANNOUNCED FOR LYCEUM COURSE

LOCAL COMMITTEE IN CHARGE HAS MADE SPLENDID SELECTION.

Ticket Sale Should Be Large

All Numbers Secured From Well-Known Redpath Bureau—A Guarantee of Quality.

The committee in charge of securing attractions for the local Lyceum course, announces that it has been fortunate in contracting for a group of attractions that rank among the very best in the entire Lyceum field. With such an especially strong course there is no question but that the sale of season tickets will be unusually large.

A Lyceum course is essentially a community-building influence. It offers good clean entertainment features and lectures which are informative and inspirational. So universally recognized is the worth of such courses that they are found in almost every community throughout the United States and Canada.

The fact that the attractions on the local course have all been secured from the Redpath Bureau, the founder of the modern American Lyceum, is in itself a guarantee of their excellence.

The following attractions will appear here this season:

Faebel Entertainers, Nov. 3.
Maude Willis, reader of plays.
Youna-Baldi Company, juggler and acrobat.
Wherahiko Rawei, Southsea Islander.
The Harp Novelty Company.

FAUBEL ENTERTAINERS

The Faebel Entertainers offer a program that is highly entertaining and filled with variety from beginning to end.

Character sketches in costume, monologues and musical readings are featured with the aid of wigs and grease paint.

Italian, Irish, Swedish, Scotch and rural characters are faithfully reproduced by Mr. Faebel, and in practically all of his work he is ably assisted by Mrs. Faebel. She also is an impersonator and a musician of real excellence.

One of the most effective programs offered by the Faebel Entertainers represents a rehearsal for an old-fashioned "Literary" of forty years ago.

CLARENCE FAUBEL

The scene is laid in the little red schoolhouse. Fourteen characters are portrayed in costume. In the instrumental part of this "take-off" there are such old-time fiddle numbers as "Leather Breeches" and "The Arkansas Traveler."

Another of the Faebel features that has been much praised by audiences is their one-act sketch, "Dust of the Road." It portrays four characters and with its serious lesson holds the keenest attention of an audience.

LARGE AUDIENCE ENJOYS THE POWERS TRIO CONCERT.

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the Powers Concert Trio at the School Auditorium Friday evening. The company was composed of Dorothy Powers, violin; Harold Powers, violin; Dudley Powers, cello; with Mrs. Powers at the piano, and J. Harold Powers as director.

The program was made up of a variety of numbers from some of the best musical masters, and these were so well rendered that encores were repeatedly called for.

The concert was given under the auspices of Miss LaSalle, supervisor of music in our city schools, and the Girls Glee club, and their efforts were well rewarded, as a neat fund was started for this organization.

Mr. J. Harold Powers is director of music at the Central State normal at Mt. Pleasant and his family are an example of what young talent may accomplish by real consistent, systematic effort along musical lines. The Glee club are to be congratulated for bringing an entertainment of this high character to Grayling, and the splendid response of our people shows that their efforts were appreciated.

COUNTY NURSE SAYS THAT:

All children in the rural schools are weighed and measured now—149 and 30 pre-school children. Thirty-nine parents also attended when the county nurse visited.

Of the 149 only 25 were without defects, making 81% with defects most of which are teeth, tho there are quite a number with tonsils that should be seen by a physician, as only a physician can determine the real condition or recommend a treatment. There may be others that are not detected by the nurse because very small tonsils are often as bad as any.

Dirty or decayed teeth certainly help to develop bad tonsils. Therefore the teeth should be looked over by the dentist twice a year. If small spots were taken care of, large fillings or loss of teeth later would be avoided.

Conditions of the body and teeth is dependent largely on having the right elements in diet. It is the parent's privilege to teach the child to keep the teeth clean and to eat the right foods, but education daily at school goes a long way to help the parents in this work. If teacher, parent and nurse work together much can be done.

Thirty-five children are from 7% to 22% underweight. This is not a disease but a condition that may predispose to disease.

Its causes vary. It may be due to physical defects or washing down the food or over fatigue, eating too fast, not drinking milk, not eating vegetables or too late bed hour. The nurse will be glad to talk with the parents or teachers and is always in the Health-Center on Saturday. (Except this week.)

Deward.

Last Friday night the Parents-Teachers' association of Deward held a meeting. Mrs. Walters is president. The County nurse and Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore of Frederic talked to the parents. Mrs. Squires talked about the pre-school clinics that will be held there on November 7th and other health matters. Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore explained the parents-teachers work. Mr. Gilmore who is athletic coach at Frederic, taught the children some new games. The fathers who were present enjoyed this part of the program also.

Supper was served by the entertainment committee. Five little girls dressed in white aprons and caps were prepared to serve the guests. About 60% of the parents of Deward were present. By some mistake some parents did not understand about the meeting but we will have another and hope to do better next time and that no one will miss the talks or the fun.

Parent-Teacher association units have been formed in all but two rural schools now.

GOV. GROESBECK WILL BE THERE

DEVELOPMENT BUREAU AND TOURIST ASS'N MEET NEXT TUESDAY.

Many From Grayling To Attend Annual Banquet In Evening.

The annual meeting and banquet of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau and East Michigan Tourist Association is to be held next week, October 28th, at Shoppengro Grotto auditorium, Bay City. The business sessions will be held in the afternoon of that day. In the evening will be the big concluding event, the annual banquet. There is always a fine menu and a peppy program of addresses. Gov. Groesbeck will be in attendance and give a talk, besides there will be a number of other good speakers.

On account of the large demand for tickets the banquet cannot be held in the Wenonah hotel, dining rooms but will be held in the Grotto Club rooms where there will be more room to accommodate the crowd. There is usually a good attendance of Grayling citizens at the banquet and it is reasonable to believe that this time will be no exception.

VERNON DECKROW DIES IN COLORADO

The death of Vernon Deckrow, that occurred at a hospital in Glenwood Springs, Colorado, last week Tuesday was a shock to his family and friends. Last January the young man went to New Castle, Colorado, to visit his brother Theon, who resides in that city. During the summer he suffered a fractured leg with which he was laid up for some time and some time later contracted influenza. He was confined to the Glenwood Springs hospital for seven weeks with the disease, and when it was thought he had sufficiently recovered he was discharged and returned to the home of his brother in New Castle. He was at the home of his brother but a few days when he suffered a relapse and returned to the hospital, where he gradually grew weaker and passed away on October 14. The direct cause of his death was thyroid ulcer and peritonitis.

The remains arrived in Grayling Monday afternoon, and the funeral was held Tuesday afternoon with services at Danebod hall, Rev. J. Herman Baughn of the Michelson Memorial church conducting same. A profusion of flowers covered the casket.

Vernon D. P. Deckrow was born March 1, 1903 in Maple Forest township and was the second youngest son of Frank R. and Nancy A. Deckrow. He received his schooling in Grayling and most of his life was spent here. Besides his parents he is survived by three brothers and two sisters, Oscar and John Deckrow and Mrs. Doris Palmer of Bay City and Mrs. Eureka Stephen and Hurl Deckrow of this city. Also a half sister Mrs. Laurel Parker of Grayling and a half brother, Theon Deckrow of Colorado. All of the above with their families were in attendance at the funeral except Theon Deckrow; also Ralph Oaks a cousin of Flint and the deceased's grandmother, Mrs. D. P. Oaks, now of Grayling, but recently of Chicago were in attendance.

The remaining members of the family have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

PROF. J. E. MILWARD TO JUDGE AT TOP O' MICHIGAN POTATO SHOW.

One of the leading experts on potatoes in the country, Prof. J. E. Milward, Horticulturist of the University of Wisconsin, will be the judge at the Top O' Michigan Potato show this year, according to Mr. A. C. Lytle, secretary of the Show. This event will take place at Gaylord on November 5-6-7. Mr. Lytle says, "We are anticipating a much bigger and better show than last year, even if that one was said to be one of the best in the country. With Antrim County in the race competition will be both numerous and keen. We expect at least 200 entries of northern Michigan's best. Our premium list is fully as attractive and the classes are about the same. The 32-potato class will attract the most competition as usual. The judging contest for bonafide farmers which is scheduled should cause some scratching of the head and, possibly, some keen rivalry. At any rate, the task before Prof. Milward, the judge, is not going to be an easy one, but being one of the most competent of judges of potatoes in the country, we know that we are going to benefit greatly by his presence."

An added attraction will be an extensive machinery exhibit, put on solely as an educational feature. All kinds of up-to-date machinery used for potato culture will be on display.

No producer of potatoes can afford to miss this show. If any potato grower in Northern Michigan fails to enter some of his potatoes he is missing a wonderful opportunity. No one believes that your potatoes are "just as good as those at the show" unless you show them.

Mr. F. J. Shipp, president of the show, maintains that the program in connection with the show will be fully as impressive and important as the exhibits of potatoes. He says, "We have never had such an array of talent at any potato-growers' meeting before. Among the speakers will be Prof. Milward, horticulturist of the University of Wisconsin; Prof. J. F. Cox of the Michigan Agricultural college; Mr. A. C. Carton and Mr. W. P. Hartman of the State Department of Agriculture; Messrs Moore and Weston, potato specialists at the College, and Jason Woodman, the pioneer potato grower from Van Buren county. Dr. Wm. Stuart, potato specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is also endeavoring to arrange his work so that he can be present."

A program is being arranged for both afternoons—Wednesday and Thursday—and it should be a most interesting one, judging from the array of talent. The annual banquet on Thursday night should also draw a large attendance because several of the best speakers will be asked to remain for this and to give short addresses.

Friday, November 7th will be the big day for the boys and girls. First, the winners of the essay contest will be the guests of the Show association. A noon banquet will be given in their honor at which our State Club leader, Mr. R. A. Turner, will be the main speaker. All the children of the district are invited to be present at that time. A judging contest will be staged in the afternoon, the winners receiving handsome prizes.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE VOTERS AND TAXPAYERS OF CRAWFORD COUNTY

As Election time is again at hand and you are called on to make your selection of Sheriff, I wish to take this opportunity to inform you that I am a candidate for sheriff, to succeed myself.

For the past two years I have served you as sheriff to the best of my ability and that there has never been a call upon the sheriff that has not been taken care of promptly and in the very best manner. I have always had the interests of the taxpayers in mind in running the office as cheaply as possible and records now in the county clerk's office will show that the Sheriff's office has never been run on as an economical basis as in the past two years.

If Elected I promise that the Office will be handled in the same efficient manner.

My campaign is not handled by any social faction or combination to gain control of my office.

I solicit your support on an unbiased platform.

I would like to call on each voter personally but due to the fact that Circuit Court is in session and other duties of the office are taking all of my time I am soliciting your support thru these columns.

CAST YOUR VOTE FOR PETER F. JORGENSON FOR SHERIFF.

EGYPTIAN PRINCE IN HIS NEW SPEED CAR

Photograph of Prince Djelalidine of Egypt in new speed car in which he hopes to break the world speed record in America soon. It was built at his order in Paris after special designs and plans made by him. It is an eight-cylinder motor of 350 horse power and he hopes to cover 300 kilometers an hour in it.

DIFFERENT TYPES OF AUTO DRIVERS

Each Individual Has His Own Ideas of Piloting Cars Through Streets.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

There are as many different types of motorcar drivers as there are human beings—there must be since the mind operating the car is human. To point out each individual kind of a driver is certainly to point directly at you in one or more cases. However, if it tends to make the reader see himself as that kind of a driver and to correct that fault before six feet of earth is piled on top of him, why—the mission of this article is accomplished.

A word about the chap who, when he wants to turn right, has somehow always maneuvered to your right and must therefore cross over in front of your car. The same with the left turn. How easy it would be for every one else if he would think a little in advance and get his machine into a position where, if he wished to turn left, he would be in the same left stream of traffic.

Driver With Dented Fenders.

Then the driver with the bent and dented fenders and the battered or missing hub caps. His special joy is to come as close to your carefully groomed car as possible without actually striking it. Often he miscalculates and your machine is shocked into a condition resembling his. You try to collect damages and discover that he owes money on his car and that it already has been attached for damages by some one else.

His brother can slip between a truck and a street car with a diligence and daring that is laudable. But one day the resulting wreck mingles several law-abiding motorists.

On the boy who comes on at a sizzling speed and then—bang!—on goes his brakes. The tires scrape, the car trembles and groans and the brakes shriek—everyone expecting a crash. But, through the fine and lofty purpose of the car's builder, things, somehow, hold together and the accident is averted—that time. But one day this habit of his results in his being removed from the highway—forever.

Hates to Slow Down.

Still another type approaches, gliding at high speed in the grooves of the trolley rails. Because of his smooth approach he hates to slow down, and whizz—over the crossing he swishes, grazing a street car, a truck, several automobiles and half-a-dozen pedestrians. Then he sticks his head out of the side and grins at the consternation he has caused. This very same grin is on his face when, later, he is hurried to the morgue.

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

Oversize Tire Mileage.

The custom of using oversize tires is becoming popular, and it may be well to remind car owners making this change that these larger sizes, one inch bigger in wheel diameter and three inches in wheel circumference, make a difference in speedometer registration. The recording instrument will turn up fewer miles with the larger tires than with standard sizes. A 30-inch tire will drop a mile in every 30 traveled or, in other words, will record only 29 miles instead of 30 actually traveled.

Ammonia Is Harmful to Finish of Auto

There used to be a common practice of trying to brighten up the finish of the hood by the use of a solution of ammonia. This is about the worst thing that could be done, as ammonia eventually destroys the finish. Unfortunately, the ammonia gives a little temporary brilliancy to the finish, but in the long run it ruins it. In fact, the car manufacturers recommend that no car be kept in a stable or barn, as the ammonia from manure gradually destroys the enameled surface.

Automobile Facts

Defective brakes are responsible for many accidents.

What makes the housing situation so terrible is the lack of garages.

Automobile factories are now one of the heaviest users of railroad freight service.

Carbon Monoxide Is Most Deadly Poison

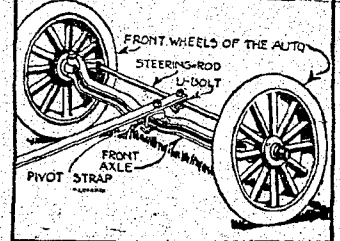

With the coming of cool weather and the consequent need of closing the garage up to keep out drafts, extra precaution must be exercised by all car owners that the exhaust gas is piped out so as not to contaminate the air inside.

Carbon monoxide, always present in exhaust fumes, is a deadly gas which exacts a heavy toll of casualties among careless motorists every winter. It is odorless and colorless and gives no warning, yet a small amount inhaled will cause death. Play safe.

Before starting your motor in the garage be sure that the pipe you are using to convey the exhaust gas to the outside air is connected up.

Car Leading Problem Is Solved by Steering Rod

Leading a car is a difficult thing unless there is some one in the car to steer it. A farmer was confronted with this problem when he tied to pull the car along behind a tractor. He solved it by using a drawbar such as is shown in the illustration. The bar, which is six feet long, is fastened to a U bolt on the front axle. A smaller U bolt clamps the end of the bar to the steering rod. As the front end of the bar is moved, the bar swivels on the axle fastening, moves the steering rod to one side, and in this way turns the wheels in the desired direction.—Popular Science Monthly.

Turning Obsolete Nut.

If a nut resists all ordinary bludgeonings try the following: Heat slightly an ordinary single spanner that fits the nut and let it rest on the nut for a few minutes. The heat transmitted from the spanner to the nut expands the latter, so that it can usually be run off without further trouble. Do not make the mistake of heating the nut with a blow lamp, as this expands the bolt also, so that the condition is unaltered.

Exhaust Valve Springs

If the springs of the exhaust valves become weak from use or heat the pistons will draw burnt gases into the cylinders, past the valves with the incoming gasoline charge, giving an improper mixture. The valve springs should be tested occasionally to see if they are of full strength. The average strength of a valve spring should be 30 pounds. At high engine speed the exhaust valves nearly always permit some leakage.

Admirable Silencer

Ordinary cotton braid, such as every woman's sewing kit contains, makes an admirable silencer wherever sheet metal comes in contact with sheet metal. Heavy cotton tape is better where there is heavy wear, as, for instance, under the hood. In the case of squeaking fenders, a length of cotton braid bunched under the fastening nuts, which are then drawn up tight on lock nuts, will be found useful in silencing noise.

To Avoid Scoring

When an engine has been standing idle for several days, so that it is reasonably sure that the cylinder walls are dry, it is a very sensible precaution to inject a couple of teaspoonfuls of cylinder oil into each cylinder by way of the petcocks and then turn the engine over a few times. This oil prevents any danger of scoring and also assists in getting good compression.

Test your battery often.

A reckless driver is a fellow who passes you on the road in spite of all you can do.

A windshield wiper will not work effectively until the glass has become slightly moist.

The "keep-to-the-right" ruling is now enforced in Rome, Italy, and has lessened traffic accidents considerably during the first two months' operation.

DAIRY

FARMER MUST KNOW PRODUCT OF COWS

That utensils exert the greatest single influence on the bacterial count of fresh milk has been shown many times by experiments, says F. C. Burton, professor of dairy industry at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

Professor Burton points out that having clean, sterile utensils is the most important of the "Big Four" in clean milk production. Clean cows, small-top pails, clean utensils, and prompt cooling. Utensils may be clean so far as the eye can discern, but unless they are thoroughly sterilized they may contribute enormous numbers of bacteria to the milk coming in contact with them.

Utensils should first be rinsed in water that is clean and cold or lukewarm. This will remove any milk that might otherwise be cooked to the sides of the utensils later when hot water is used. They should then be washed in hot water containing an alkali or washing powder. Scrubbing with a stiff brush is necessary to get into the cracks and seams. Wash rags, soaps, and greasy powders should not be used in the dairy. A final rinsing in clean water prepares the utensils for sterilization. Steam is the best sterilizing agent. Live steam should be applied upon the utensils for five minutes. After that the utensils will dry quickly when inverted on a rack.

Boiling in water for five to ten minutes is next best to steaming. The drying of utensils after sterilization should not be overlooked, and protection from dust, flies, and chickens is important.

The importance of washing utensils immediately after using them is very great. Experiments showed that when utensils were washed directly after milking, the average bacterial count of the subsequent milking was 600,000 in 25 drops of the milk. When some of the utensils were left unwashed for eight hours and then washed in the same manner as the other utensils, the subsequent milking had an average count of 1,677,000 bacteria in 25 drops of the milk.

Improved Milk Shipping Methods to Avoid Loss

To develop better methods for handling and shipping milk from the farms to the city market is the object of an investigation of practices in various milk plants, which is being made by the dairy division of the United States Department of Agriculture. Milk losses during shipment have a marked effect upon the price that the consumer must pay for the product, and upon the price that the farmer receives for the product. The losses are of two kinds; those resulting from milk souring in transit, and those from theft, spoilage and leakage. Both are believed to be avoidable if the farmer, country dealer and city dealer will work together.

Dealers are being asked to give information on various subjects, such as the methods used for transporting milk from the farm to the dealer, the protection provided for milk while in transit between the dealer and the city market, and the relative efficiency of different types of refrigerator cars.

Five Points to Observe in Selecting Dairy Cow

The five points to be observed in selecting a good dairy cow are as follows:

First—Large body, and especially middle piece, indicating a capacity for eating and digesting a lot of food.

Second—Thinly fleshed backbone, and especially back of the shoulders. This indicates that the food is not made into flesh.

Third—Large udder, as it is here that the milk is made.

Fourth—Large milk wells. It is through these that the blood returns to the heart from the udder. If they are large, it indicates that a large amount of blood passes through the udder.

Fifth—Large, clear eyes. This indicates good nerves, and they drive the organs of digestion and milk-making.

Treating Hard Milkers

Hard-milking cows are treated by the persistent use of dilators or by cutting the lining membrane of the teat with a teat bistoury. After this is done a little milk must be stripped away often during the milking process. In some cases it may be advisable to cut away a small portion of the tip of the teat. These instruments may be obtained and used at home, but it is usually best to have the work done by a veterinarian unless one is skilled with the instruments.

DAIRY FACTS

The dairyman who is receiving less than 200 pounds of butterfat from his cow is being poorly paid for his labor.

The silo provides the best and cheapest form of succulent winter feed, which helps to keep the cows healthy and productive when dairy products are highest.

There is only one method to fairly judge a bull as a producer, and that method is through keeping records of his offspring. Proven sires are always at a premium and many good sires are sacrificed because there is no attempt made in many cases to really prove their merits.

If you love the cows and the alfalfa and the corn and the soil itself, you are in a mighty good way to become a successful farmer. If you don't you'd better be running a country grocery store.

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

(Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE BAKER LADY

IS YOUR talent for baking? And are there, in your town, certain bachelors who are reputed to live solely on flap-jacks; bachelor girls who are popularly supposed to dine daily out of cups; society folks who have difficulty finding on Main Street just the baked dainties they would like to have for their parties and dinners?

If it is, and there are, your fortune is made, says one girl who is famed in her home town for her short and flaky biscuits, coffee cakes, cream puffs and cookies, her delectable corn bread and pie.

"My one talent is baking," she is fond of saying. "I always wondered whether such a homely household accomplishment had any commercial value. I settled the point by starting a bakery in the kitchen at home, and I have proved to my own satisfaction that my talent can earn something besides compliments from the family."

The girl who seriously desires to start in the business, must of course, be a good "bakeress." If she is, she knows probably about the ingredients, kitchen utensils, and equipment she will need. In general, she should remember that the best materials are always the cheapest.

There is more profit in fancy baking than in bread, though bread is the best stand-by; but few women customers can resist some of the tempting dainties which are revealed when they take the bread out of the basket. The baker lady should hire a small boy, for the job of carrying the baskets about to the prospective customer's door.

In preparation for her basket-boy's visits, the baker lady should call at the homes of friends and acquaintances, telling them of her project and soliciting orders. If her sales are limited for a time, she may sell her wares to local confectionery stores and groceries, or have them displayed and handled on a commission basis. The woman's exchange usually provides a market. An advertisement in the newspaper is not a great expense, and will reach the people who probably would not hear of her project any other way.

But never, no matter how large her business grows, should she cease her personal supervision of every biscuit, pie or cake—for that's the only way she can honestly use in advertising the phrase that is her main stock-in-trade, "Personally cooked."

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

JUST as simplicity plus originality is what costs in clothes, so a work that is among the most simple and yet unique of jobs has a high cash value—selling lists of names.

"Any energetic small-town girl can get into this business, and have a monopoly of her field, providing it is not already occupied," says one little list-maker who is also a money maker.

"The girl who undertakes this business," she told me, "should compile a list, as nearly complete as possible, of all persons in her neighborhood, town or township. This list is to be her own personal and permanent record, but it must, since changes are constantly occurring, be frequently brought up to date. Such a list, when carefully made is a real 'working capital' which will earn money for its owner."

Every year there are numbers of political candidates who want the names of all voters in a township; and they pay liberally for such a list when it is accurately compiled.

Banking institutions, constantly trying to educate people in matters of thrift, will buy names and addresses of persons who have no savings accounts. Even a list of names unclassified as to who have bank accounts and who have not is useful to the bank, but it will be worth more, of course, the greater the amount of proposed information it contains. While getting information about savings, it is well for the compiler to note who carry insurance and what kind. Insurance agents will be glad to pay for this information.

Mail order houses are always on the lookout for new names to which they can address their catalogues and circulars. A business house which has once bought a list of names and has found it up-to-date and reliable, will be anxious to purchase a revision at least once in every two years. These "personally conducted" lists are the only reliable ones from which business men can get complete mailing lists for a given territory. Township voting lists and the rolls kept by the assessor are generally not only incomplete but out-of-date. The post office does not, as some people think, give out lists of names and addresses. That is the secret of the value of lists of names, and the reason why, when a girl is known to possess such a list, she will have frequent calls for it. Her prices should vary according to the amount of wanted information she can give the customer; mere names and addresses, while valuable, are not, of course, as valuable as more detailed information is.

Selling lists of names may seem an odd way of earning a living; but there are tempting possibilities in the work, and it requires no capital to make the effort.

Really an Accident

Mary, the new maid, complained that Master John, aged 5, had put out his tongue at her. The following dialogue ensued:

Mother—John, how dare you be so rude? Putting your tongue out is a vulgar trick.

John—I didn't put my tongue out. "Don't tell lies now, you naughty boy."

"I didn't put my tongue out. I was going past Mary with my mouth open and my tongue happened to fall out."

MISS HAM'S ESCAPE

"Grunt, grunt," said Porky Pig.

"Why are you looking so excited, Miss Ham?"

"Yes, squeal, squeal, what is it?" asked Pinky Pig.

"Tell us, Miss Ham," said Mrs. Pinky Pig. "I long to hear the news, squeal, squeal."

"Yes, tell us, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig's mother.

"Do tell us, grunt, grunt," said Master Pinky Pig.

"I'd like to know, squeal, squeal," said Mrs. Pinky Pig.

"Yes, what is the reason for your excitement?" said Master Pinky Pig's mother. "Grunt, grunt."

"Well, you do, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon.

"We want to know, grunt, grunt," said Sammy Sausage.

"Indeed we do, squeal, squeal," said Little Black Squealer.

"You'd better tell us," said Sir Percival Pork. "Grunt, grunt."

"You might just as well," said Sir Benjamin Bacon. "Grunt, grunt, you might just as well."

"I'll tell you," said Miss Ham. "And maybe you'll be excited, too."

"Maybe; there's no telling," said Porky Pig.

"Grunt, grunt, there's no telling," said Pinky Pig.

"Squeal, squeal, there's no telling," said Mrs. Pinky Pig.

"Grunt, grunt, there's no telling," said Pinky Pig's mother.

"Grunt, grunt, there's no telling," said Master Pinky Pig's mother.

"Squeal, squeal, there's no telling," said Brother Bacon.

"Grunt, grunt, there's no telling," said Sammy Sausage.

"There's no telling, grunt, grunt," said Sir Percival Pork.

"No telling," squealed Little Black Squealer.

"There's no telling, grunt, grunt," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"You'd better give me a chance," said Miss Ham. "If you pigs keep on grunting and squealing like this I won't have the chance.

"Well, I will tell you."

"Some of the family said:

"We haven't had ham for a long long time. We would dearly love some ham."

"First it would be nice to have boiled ham. Then we could have cold ham and we could have a supper party with cold ham and salad, and then we could have an omelette with ham."

"Well, that wasn't such cheering news, but I was not chosen. Some of the other pigs around who aren't the dear pig pets we are can be chosen, and are chosen."

"And as I say, I wasn't chosen."

The pigs all started to grunt and squeal that they could see that much, but with a swish of her little crooked tail and a loud grunt Miss Ham went on with her story.

"Still, I felt a little nervous. My name is ham and when they speak of ham I feel a little uneasy."

"But today I heard the man of the family talking and he said:

"I don't want ham again for months."

"I ate boiled ham for three nights running and then I had cold ham for two nights—there was cold ham another night but I couldn't eat it—I was so tired of it. Then we had ham omelette until I never want to see one again."

"At least not for a very long time. I've had enough ham to last me for months."

"Now he had been the one who had been wanting ham. I had felt a little nervous about him. I tried my best to smile at him in my coy pig fashion whenever he came near the barnyard and perhaps it helped."

"But when I heard how tired he was of ham I said to my pig self:

"Miss Ham, you've escaped. You can rest easily for a long, long time."

"For even though you might never have been chosen—still this is comforting, cheering news."

"Do you wonder I feel excited over my sure and certain escape?"

"Grunt, grunt, squeal, squeal," said all of the other pigs, "we quite understand, we quite understand."

"Grunt, grunt, grunt."

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do when children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 84 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

"ELLEN!"

SYNOPSIS—Ellen and Joe Latimer, orphans, without means, make their home with their Aunt Elsie, at Port Washington, small New York town. Ellen is studying art, her expenses being paid by Mrs. Rose, girlhood friend of her mother. Mrs. Rose invites Ellen to a Thanksgiving house party and the girl is delighted. On the way from the station to Mrs. Rose's Ellen rides with a remarkably attractive young woman and a much older man. She takes them for father and daughter, but they are introduced as Mr. and Mrs. Josselyn. Ellen does not "fit in" with the younger members of the party, and is miserable. Leaving for her home next morning, Ellen meets Gibbs Josselyn, son of her fellow guest. He has disappeared from his father's wedding and is not speaking terms with the couple. Declining to stay at Mrs. Rose's, Gibbs drives Ellen to the station. They miss the train and Gibbs undertakes to drive the girl to Port Washington. Ellen is hurt, but it is not thought to be serious, and she and Gibbs part. He has been attracted by the girl, and she by him. Ellen's injury proves to be severe, and for months she is an invalid.

The glory of the year deepened swiftly, and joy kept pace with it. In Ellen's heart, the harness was long gone, the couch was upstairs again, and only a cushioned rocking-chair in its place. Ellen could sweep the garden path again, with her blue sunbonnet over her eyes. Ellen could cut out cookies on condition that she went straight upstairs and lay down for an hour afterward. Except that she usually went to bed at eight o'clock, and avoided the more violent forms of youthful amusement, Ellen might live her old life again.

But it would never be the old life. It was so enriched and so enhanced by the five long months in prison that Ellen felt sensations of freedom absolutely unlike, warmth and flowers and blue sky intoxicated her. Leonard Henshaw, for whose attentions she had wistfully longed a year ago, was her captive now, but she did not want to marry Leonard Henshaw. She only wanted to be alive, and to claim her work and play among the living again. May thirtieth, always a great day in Port Washington annals, broke cloudless, and found all the village already in holiday mood. The yacht clubs would go into commission at high noon, with every imaginable form of guinea to do honor to the occasion. At the Port Washington club, where Ellen and her friends would presently gather, there were to be swimming races, a great outdoor luncheon, a baseball game between the married and the unmarried men, moving pictures, games and prizes for the small children, a faneaguntill long after midnight, and, of course, the raising of the colors.

Ellen was taken down by the Henshaw boys, in their car, at eleven o'clock, and was under parole not to race, even if she swam, not to "crew" even if she sailed, and to be home at five o'clock to get three hours' rest before the dance.

Strings of color were fluttering everywhere, women with baskets were gathering on the clubhouse porch, eager boats were cutting about the pier and like restless gulls, tenders, loaded to their capacities, were making for the yachts. Presently the colors went up, fluttering gayly against the blue, and the cannon, fired from the grassy mound before the clubhouse, was answered by twenty booming shots from the boats. As the detonation died away the band burst madly into sound, and thirty young figures plunged from the pier end for the first swim, to pull themselves upon the float a moment later as sleek as seals, and add their shrieks and laughter to the general uproar.

If Ellen Latimer, one of the seals, who was warning Bobby Carnival that if he pushed her into the water again he would be sorry for it the longest day of his life, had chanced to glance toward The Eaglet, one of the visiting yachts in the bay, anchored three hundred yards away from her, she might at this moment have received a shock. For a man with a thick mop of silver hair under a visored yachting cap was standing there, yawning happily in the warm sunshine. Gibbs Josselyn, if he had been through no such schooling as Ellen in the last few months, had suffered, too, in his own way. Like Ellen, he had seemed to lose his place in the world, with his father's marriage, his resignation from his father's firm, and the transplanting from his father's house to his club. Sensitive and proud, he found the attitude of his intimates equally distasteful, whether they sympathized with him or criticized him, he missed his work, and found no incentive to take up anything new.

Without his realizing it, the pretty little Miss Latimer had touched him. She was not flirting, like Lucie, she was dead in earnest, the bright-eyed, rosy little enthusiast.

He chanced to come to Manhasset harbor with George Latrop and George's motherless boy and girl in time for the opening of the clubs on Decoration day.

George, Junior, leaping out of the cabin ready for swimming, the older men followed suit, and Gibbs, whom the boy favored blindly in all things, passed him in the fresh dancing water, and dragged himself up on the anchored raft at the side of the club pier, where they got into conversation with a boy in a dirty gray sweater, who was sitting there idly in the sun.

"This is going to be the girls' race now," said the boy, when he and George, Junior, had discussed several important matters. "They'll all line up here, and dive, and swim to the float, and touch it, and then swim back."

On the pier, the crowd was gathering to watch the races, and presently a dozen slender laughing girls in wet bathing suits formed a line on the edge of the float, and at the crack of the pistol were into the water with one shout, and tearing like so many salmon for the swimmers' float. The swiftest boy was now heard to observe to George, Junior:

"That's my sister out there on the float. She could beat 'em all! She got first prize last year, and two years ago. She fell out of an automobile, and hurt her spine, and they won't let her swim yet."

"I don't know what she's doing in that rig, then," Gibbs observed.

"Oh, well, she swims, but she can't race!"

Gibbs thought the big, loosely-built country fellow had a most engaging smile, and paid small attention to his words at the moment. Meanwhile Ellen, wrapped in a mantle of drying black hair, was rocking herself back and forth on the float, discussing the races, and congratulating the winner. Perhaps she noticed the two strange men and the boy who dived suddenly from the anchor float, but as this happened to be the moment when the Henshaw boys, with two girl passengers, elected to upset their canoe, it was probable that she saw nothing of the victors.

Later, when she and Aunt Elsie were busy at the lunch tables that had been built on the green between the clubhouse and the tennis courts, and with a score of other women were cutting cakes, helping salad, and pouring coffee, Joe lounged up to them, gorming on sandwiches, interested in all other forms of food, and even willing to be useful in some not too conspicuous way.

"There's a feller on one of the yachts that ast me to come out with a boat, about four o'clock, and bring him in to get cigarettes and ice and butter and things," Joe volunteered. "He asked me my name, and I said Latimer. I get sick of this 'Joe-Joe-Joe' business. Every yop in the place is named Joe! Gosh, that kid with them must have things pretty easy. His sister was there, a little kid—but Gosh, she was a pippin! Harriet! She's about ten or twelve with her hair all hanging round!"

Ellen laughed, and for the young Latimers the episode seemed closed. And yet not only to Ellen, and to Gibbs Josselyn, but to Joe and the innocent Harriet of the hanging locks, the hour was filled with possibilities, and never to be stricken from the calendar of the four lives again.

For Gibbs had caught the name Joe called to George Latrop, Senior, and had mused upon it. "Latimer—that's funny. Latimer and Port Washington—he might be her cousin or something. I suppose the same names run through all grades in these old country places. If he comes at six, I'll ask him, if he knows my little lady. What did Mrs. Rose call her?—Helen, that was it?"

"Is there any one down here named Helen Latimer?" he duly asked Joe, late in the sweet summer afternoon, when the races were over.

"No, sir. I guess my grandfather and my sister and I are the only ones of that name," Joe answered, after a moment's thought.

"You never heard of a lady named Mrs. Rose—Mrs. Sewall Rose?"

"Sure I did!" Joe said, smiling. "She's the lady that got my sister started in the art school!"

"Well, of course!" Gibbs was surprised at his own pleasure in identifying her at last. "Your sister, that's it! And what is her name?"

"Ellen," Joe smiled.

"Ellen, of course!" Gibbs echoed. "Well, how is she?"

"Oh, she's all right now," Joe answered carelessly. "If you're coming ashore for the dance tonight, you'll see her. She can't dance, except just a little, but she's going down."

"I hardly think we will come in for the dance," Gibbs answered. "Funny she looks as if she could dance! But you give her my love—Mr. Josselyn, will you?"

At the dinner table George Latrop asked Gibbs if he had noticed that boy. That was no sort of boy to be knocking about the water front of a small fishing village, he had an exceptionally fine face.

Use of Columns Gave Charm to Old Houses
Much of the charm of old Colonial houses in the United States and of the plantation mansions of the old South was inherent in the use of the architectural column, an element wherever men build beauty as well as sound construction into the structures they erect.
For thousands of years, from far off antiquity, architects and builders have found nothing so utilitarian and beautiful as the column. Most all of the famed buildings of the ages owe much of their character and beauty to the use of columns as important exterior and interior structural details.
A column fulfills its purpose when it really supports the structural weight above it. It should never be a false ornamental detail, forcing the structural support to be gained elsewhere. Steel is a material which lends itself particularly well to column construction and is capable of yielding that sharpness of line that a

"I'd like to get hold of a boy like that, and keep him about the place," Latrop said, enthusiastically. "It would be the making of George."

"Well, if you like the boy, I assure you you'd be amazed at the sister," Gibbs said. "She's a little beauty; dainty, clever, quick as a whip! I take it they're the best sort of American blood, come of a long line of simple, decent people."

"What's the matter with her?" Latrop asked.

"The matter with her—how d'you mean?" Gibbs, who was mixing a salad dressing, looked up sharply.

"Why, she's sickly, or something," his host answered innocently. "Didn't you hear the boy say this morning that she couldn't swim any more, and just now, didn't you hear him say that she couldn't dance?"

"He said she'd been in a motor accident, and hurt her spine," little George said. "But she got the prize for swimming last year, and second prize in the ladies' singles—What is it, Uncle Gibbs?"

For Gibbs had laid down his fork and was staring at him strangely.

"Great Lord!" he said in a horrified undertone. "But that couldn't be! And as they all looked at him in surprise, he turned toward his host. "You remember when my car was in a smash-up, last November, George?" he said. "It just occurred to me—it just occurred to me that that little girl was with me! I don't suppose there's one chance in a thousand that that was where she got hurt—I don't suppose there's one chance in a million!"

He got up and walked to the cabin window. The sunset gun had fired, the banners were lowered, Port Washington was dotted with lights in the early darkness; other lights mirrored themselves in the quiet bay.

Then She Stopped Speaking and One Hand Went With a Quick Gesture to Her Heart, and in the Dimness He Saw Her Breast Rise Suddenly, and Her Lips Part a Little.

"I guess you and I will have to go over and have a look at that dance, George," he said.

It was a night made for youth, and beauty, and the innocent, radiant egotism of beauty and youth. Ellen knew, when the girls told her she looked perfectly adorable, that they spoke no more than the truth. To her happy eyes they all looked adorable, and she truthfully returned their compliments.

Gibbs, his host, and both the children came ashore in the rowboat of The Eaglet at eight o'clock. Latrop, Senior, had friends among the club members, and was quickly taken to the heart of Port Washington's young set. He was a democratic man, and he liked to see his daughter's blonde locks bobbing over the shoulder of the boy who had rowed the boat that afternoon. Gibbs had declined to enter the ballroom at once, and had remained on the porch to finish his cigarette.

From the darkness here he watched the dancers, and he had no difficulty in finding Ellen, in her pale pink ruffles, with her exquisite, radiant face. She was not dancing, although the blue eyes and the pink slippers evidently longed to dance, and when Gibbs first saw her, was talking prettily to some older woman with great gravity and attention. A youth came up and she transferred her earnest gaze to him, and presently Gibbs felt a quick sensation of almost pain near his heart as her face brightened into an actual laugh.

"So sweet, so young, so innocently fresh, and good! Gibbs wondered whether summer and moonlight had gotten into his blood, as he felt it run warmer at the sight of her. Too dignified to write him what a day of pleasure had cost her, too honest to make capital out of the fortuitous chance, she could adjust her little affairs with courage and character, and, having chosen her path, pursue it to the end.

The man who won Ellen Latimer would be a lucky man, he thought, with a curious wistfulness.

And suddenly, with an unaccustomed flush of color in his face, the question sprang into his heart full formed. Suppose such a girl could come to care for a man like him? Where could he find anything better, or sweeter, or more rich in promise for the years to come? He was tired of the old life, he had never really cared for the false standards, the superficial women, the intriguing, shallow girls, the show and glitter and cost. To put his arm about that lovely young body, to feel her close to him as she raised her flowerlike face for his kiss, to see Ellen in the sort of gown he could design for her, crouched beside a studio fire, looking an old garden in spring—Nothing in months had so stirred his old delight in living as the thought of pleasing her, spotting her, finding the untouched depths of her joy always fresh.

Suddenly the plan was born. Paris! They would go to Paris, and there they could both work, and could make for themselves a life nothing short of the ideal. A dim old studio, one of those clever maids who delight in the cooking art, summers idling in Brittany or Holland. And the lovely young Mrs. Josselyn, a picture in gipsy hats and summer smocks, or velvet, childish winter gowns, would fill his life with sweetness, and inspiration, and everything that was clean and good and honest.

He crossed the porch to the door of the ballroom as the dance ended, and met her, in the group of girls and boys who were coming out for a breath of cooler air. She was talking to another girl, but she saw the strange man, and turned her bright eyes curiously toward him. Then she stopped speaking, and one hand went with quick gesture to her heart, and in the dimness he saw her white breast rise suddenly, and her lips part a little.

He got her hand, and held it, and still she did not speak, merely stood breathing high, and looking steadily at him.

Gibbs found his own voice curiously unmanageable. He cleared his throat. "Ellen!" he said.

Another dance began, and another, and yet another. And through them all Ellen and Gibbs sat on the dark porch, over the softly moving water, and talked with that desperate deep relief that pilgrims know who find fresh, icy springs after the parching desert, or mothers know who weep beside the bedside of the child that will live.

It seemed to Ellen that all her life had been only a preparation for that talk. Sometimes he made her laugh, and she would flash him a look from averted blue eyes, and bring all her dimples into sudden play, and often she made him laugh, and would regard him with delicious childish seriousness until his mirth was explained. But for the most part they were serious, there was much to explain, much that was sad and poignantly sweet to remember, and with eloquent looks and monosyllables they relived it all, and found it inexhaustibly wonderful and strange.

And at midnight Ellen was driven away, by Leonard Henshaw, her hand still warm from the touch of Gibbs' big hand, her shoulder still feeling the pressure of his protective arm, her heart and mind and soul in a whirl of starshine. She undressed, wrapped in a sort of love for the gown and the hair and the eyes Gibbs had praised, and lay down on her small white bed and extinguished her light so promptly that her restless aunt, in the next room, felt a sensation of gratitude.

But Ellen had no time to waste with sleep tonight.

Nor did Gibbs sleep. He sat outside his stateroom far into the morning, smoking, thinking, smoking again. At about four o'clock, when a faint light of dawn was glimmering in the darkness, George, Senior, looked yawning out.

"For the Lord's sake—old man!"

"I know—I'm coming now," Gibbs arose, cold, yawning and stretching. "I know," he apologized, smiling. And coming near to the tangled and pajama-clad form of his friend he said with a certain boyish appeal in his voice: "I'm awfully happy about something, George, and awfully—sort of scared. Wish me luck, old man!"

"Well, it's evident Gibbs and Ellen are to be married. How will their marriage turn out? That's the next question."

Listening for a Metal

Old legends tell of men who had the power to look down into the earth and see where gold and silver lay hidden.

We cannot do this yet, but something almost as wonderful is now possible, says London Tit-Bits. We can listen and hear the veins of precious metals.

Two Swedish engineers, Hans Lundberg and Harry Nathorst, have invented an electrical instrument which will locate metallic ores under the ground and indicate their presence by making a sound that can be heard.

The prospector carries the instrument over the ground he is prospecting and, with telephone receivers fixed on his head, listens. When the instrument passes over a vein a sound is heard, and the prospector knows that what he seeks is somewhere beneath his feet.

"Patented Leather"

"Patented leather" is the real name of the Japanese and permanently polished leather that nowadays we speak of as "boto leather."

When boots made of this leather first began, very many years ago, to be put on the market, they were described as "patented." As a matter of fact, it is doubtful whether the whole process was patented, though, of course, each successive inventor has patented his particular varnish, and so on.

Rain Good for New Suits
Cloth from which suits for men and women are made, is invariably kept in a moist condition when being made up at the mills in order to give strength to the wool and to prevent breakage when it is being worn. A dry atmosphere would mean many "faults" in the piece. For this reason cloth makers are warning the public that rain occasionally will not hurt a new outfit, but on the other hand will do some suits a lot of good. One tailor suggests ten minutes in a misting rain as the best "drink" for a suit, especially in the early days of its life.

Stone Bruises Have Value
Stone bruises on the feet are a sure cure for nervous disorders. In the opinion of a German specialist, who sees many of his patients walking in their bare feet over stony fields. The more tender the patients' feet the quicker will be the cure, in the opinion of this expert on nervous disorders.
He holds that many nervous persons are unable to take their minds off troubles which they brood over constantly and has found over a long time of years that it is not possible for many patients to worry about other troubles if they have bruised and swollen feet.

Chance for Inventors
One of the most needed inventions of modern times is a smooth road surface that will not be slippery in wet weather.

Two Cars in One—

An open and closed car combined

STUDEBAKER Duplex—a closed and open car combined. An entirely new type car—developed by Studebaker and available from no other maker.

It is the most sensational—most talked-of car in America.

One minute you are enjoying the comfort and protection of a closed car—next the unhindered freedom that made the open car so popular. And the change can be made in 30 seconds by simply lowering the outer side enclosures.

Yet with all this two-fold convenience, the Duplex-Phaeton sells for no more than an open car.

The new Studebaker Big Six is strikingly beautiful—with long, low sweeping lines. It is especially designed and powered for seven-passenger service.

The Big Six Duplex-Phaeton is delivered to you with complete equipment. This even includes two highest grade bumpers, extra balloon tire, tube and tire cover—there is nothing else to buy.

But to appreciate this car you must inspect it—drive it. Test its delightful ease of operation—steering mechanism especially designed for its full-sized balloon tires.

Notice the new location of the lighting switch on the steering wheel—and many other new and unusual features.

See this car that has definitely solved the open-closed car problem.

VOTE NO on all Amendments.

PEOPLE have confidence in Dean Mortimer Cooley, Democrat candidate for United States senator. For nearly forty years he was at the head of the engineering classes of the University of Michigan. Thousands of young men have graduated under him and will be back of him in the election with their votes. He is a man among men. He knows men and boys and is humanly interested in the people and the state. He is a second Democrat because he believes in the principles of the Democratic party and may be relied upon to maintain its principles if elected. He says, however, that in case the election of president and vice president is thrown into the Senate and House of representatives that he will vote for the candidates that are the choice of the Michigan people, which, of course will be Coolidge and Dawes. Here again he shows his fair mindedness. Cooley's Republican opponent is too self satisfied to make a good servant of the people. He probably feels as Jay Gould did when he said "the public be damned." He is too rich to be in accord with the common people. With a hundred million or more he cannot feel the hardships of the poorer classes. Cooley is truly worthy of the confidence that the people of Michigan seem to have for him. For years he has given his splendid talents in the training of young men, and the compensation has been far below that of common tradesmen. Will the people reciprocate at this time? We believe they will, and there will be no reason later to apologize for having done so, we are confident.

Coats Achieve Varied Styling; Winter Hats to Suit Everyone

IN COATS the mode continues to show much partiality for simplicity and even severity of line, and there is no question that the straightline outer garment is "correct." This is reassuring knowledge, but every woman aspires to own a coat that is even more than correct—she wants one that is distinctive. Designers strive by different means to achieve this desired "chic"—through the use of novel fabrics or by unusual decorative features or originality in design and management of styles.

The creator of the charming coat shown here chose unusual decoration could be said of them for there was never so much diversity in headwear as there is now. Or perhaps it seems that way since the reaction came and we turned our backs on the small cloche so universally worn.

The group starts off with one of those soft off-the-face velvet shapes with a wayward brim widened at the front and caught to the crown with a ribbon and fabric ornament at the right side. This is one of many that keep to the right in placing their trimmings. When winter comes we shall see many soft off-the-face hats, some of them covered with the most to place it in the ranks of those that claim distinction. Like many winter coats it fastens to one side and is made of wool velours, with straight, standing collar of fur. Loops of braid placed in rows in a novel arrangement make a beautiful finish for it and one that has the additional feature of being thoroughly practical as well.

To be chic and practical at the same time, is all that any coat needs, to be popular as well. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished—the end brilliant embroideries and gold braidings. Others go further and are set with mock jewels, and queens are not more gorgeously crowned than their wearers will be.

"Spain" is written on the hat at the right quite as plainly as if the great seal of state had been affixed to it. It is one of many popular sailor models with a row of sequins about the brim edge and a chain strap of moire ribbon which appears to slip through the brim, for it crosses the crown. Many a youthful head adds to its attractions that all designers strive for. Beautiful fabrics that wear well help solve the problem for manufacturers, and there are novel stripes and plaids, new patterns in flannelette cloth, corded silks and fabric furs that need almost nothing in the way of decorations, being highly decorative in themselves. Fur bandings are liked for them in collar and cuffs, and occasionally bordering the hemline or front fastening. When plain materials are used the styling is varied by ingenious collars, jabots, three-tiered cuffs or odd front openings.

Here are five winter hats, each one beautiful and interesting, but each entirely different from all the others. If the group contained fifty hats it is likely that the same things when this picturesque hat adorns it. The model is in black.

A beautiful velvet hat in which a light facing relieves the dark covering is shown in the center of the group. It is a forerunner of the mode in flower-trimmed hats for midwinter. Its crown is high and made higher by two huge silk and velvet roses poised at the left side. Many color combinations are possible in hats of this kind and they look best on the dignified heads of mature types. At the lower right a chic velvet hat, with an eccentric brim line is shown—it has a flare of ostrich across the back—likely to be in flame color and a gold cord about the crown. It will find its proper resting place above an animated face. Felt and velvet are combined in the familiar shape that finishes the group and it is trimmed with one of those white-tipped black pompoms that have so much style.

Canary Yellow Much in Use

For frocks, sports suits and hats, a deep canary yellow is extensively featured as one of the smartest colors for summer. Entire costumes carry out this single color scheme and it is also used in conjunction with white.

Earrings That Charm

A pair of earrings that are slightly different are of white jade. The pendants are very long and are carved to suggest baskets of flowers.

Coming in Again

A considerable change is predicted in footwear. The oxford is coming in again for autumn. Heels will not be very high, the Cuban being most often seen.

Golf Coat Useful

The golf coat sweater is a useful thing. It may be worn at the country club, on the links or for horseback riding, and it is worn on all these occasions.

OLD KENTUCKY DISHES

The pies of the Blue Grass country are different from the Northern—richer but most tasty.

Bisque Pie—

Cook together a pint of milk, one-half cupful of granulated sugar, the yolks of five eggs to a rich custard, add a tablespoonful of cornstarch, moistened with a little of the cold milk and cook until thick; then add half a dozen macaroons, crushed, one-fourth pound of candied cherries, chopped, the same of candied pineapple, with one-fourth teaspoonful of almond extract and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. The filling is poured into two baked shells and topped with a meringue made of the egg whites beaten stiff with ten tablespoonfuls of sugar, two or three crushed macaroons and vanilla and almond flavoring. Brown in a moderate oven. Serve cold.

Cream Davoli.—Take one large cooked chicken. Cut the meat from it and grind fine, adding one-fourth pound of lean ham also ground, crumbs from a small loaf of bread soaked in the broth in which the chicken was cooked, squeezed dry. Mix the meat and crumbs, then add a teaspoonful of white pepper, a dash of cayenne, two tablespoonfuls of grated onion, a grating of nutmeg, a sprinkle of mace, two well-beaten eggs and enough sweet cream to make the mixture into a loaf. Press into a greased mold and steam three hours. Turn out and serve with:

Mushroom Sauce.—Use a pint of thin cream, two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, with salt and pepper to taste. Simmer and cook until thick, then add a can of mushrooms or its equivalent in fresh mushrooms which have been cut into bits and cooked in butter five minutes.

Banana Croquettes.—Remove the skins from bananas, cut into halves crosswise and remove the seeds. Dip into crumbs, egg and crumbs again and fry in deep fat. Served with a lemon sauce they make a dairy dessert.

A commonplace life, we say, and we sigh.

But why should we sigh as we say? The commonplace sun in the commonplace sky. Makes up the commonplace day. The moon and the stars are commonplace things.

The flowers that bloom and the bird that sings; But sad was the world, and dark our lot.

If the flowers faded and the sun shone not. And God, who sees each separate soul. Out of commonplace lives makes a beautiful whole.

—Susan Coolidge.

A DAY WITH CROQUETTES

Croquettes may be prepared of various kinds of meat and served as a main dish, or simply as an entree or dessert.

Chicken Croquettes.—Mix one and one-half cupfuls of chopped cooked chicken with one-half cupful of thick white sauce, one beaten egg yolk, salt, pepper, paprika and celery salt to taste, with a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Chill and form into croquettes, dip into egg, crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Egg Croquettes.—Poach six eggs and dry on a towel. Cook one-half slice of onion with two tablespoonfuls of butter for three minutes, add one-half cupful of flour, and to it add gradually one cupful of chicken stock. Season to taste and stir, cooking until smooth. Add three beaten egg yolks and cook one minute, stirring constantly. Cool and cover the poached eggs with the mixture.

Roll in sifted bread crumbs and grated cheese, using equal parts. Dip in diluted egg, again roll in crumbs, fry in deep fat and drain on paper. Serve with a white sauce prepared from equal parts of cream and chicken stock; season with grated cheese.

Corn Croquettes.—Chop one-half of a green pepper, boil two minutes and drain, add to one can of corn, season with a teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of paprika and pepper to taste. Bring to the boiling point and add six tablespoonfuls of flour, blended with one-fourth cupful of butter. Turn out on a platter and when cool form into balls, egg and crumb them and fry as usual.

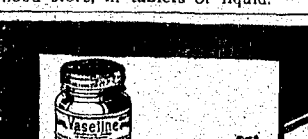

Pecan Salad.—Cut one large orange into small cubes after removing peel and fiber. Cut a cupful of the white hearts of celery into cubes and drop into cold water with a little lemon juice; leave on ice until wanted. To two cupfuls of pecan meats add the well-drained celery and the orange, arrange on the tender heart leaves of lettuce and serve with mayonnaise to which an equal quantity of whipped cream has been added. Garnish with bits of pimento cut into strips.

Tuberculosis Test.
Two of the State men were here last week and made final arrangements with the Board of Supervisors for carrying on the test of all cattle in the county for tuberculosis. This is an official test, and all persons will be required to submit their cattle to the test.

The test does not in any way injure the cattle.

If an animal is not found to be a reactor (have tuberculosis) no harm is done by the test.

If an animal is found to be a reactor, surely every right-minded man wants such an animal destroyed, so germs of tuberculosis from it will not be given to human beings, especially children.

Tuberculosis germs are carried through milk, cream, butter.

Test is Accurate.

The present methods for testing cattle for tuberculosis is accurate in practically all cases.

It can not be very far from right when so many people stand for having their cattle tested by these methods.

Last year 390,000 cattle were tested in Michigan alone.

Many other states are testing.

No Use Talking About Shot Gun.

This test is under the management of the State and United States government authorities. When they start a test they go through with it. No use talking about what you will do with your shot gun to any one who comes on your place to test your cows.

Read This Little Story.
The following story is issued by our State Department of Agriculture. The herd of Robert Goben, Paris, Illinois, was placed under the supervision of Federal and State officials two years ago. A jersey cow was tuberculin tested and reacted; a tag was placed in her ear and she was branded on the jaw by the Federal veterinarian. This cow was in good flesh at the time she reacted and Mr. Goben told his hired man, James Kelly, that if she had tuberculosis he would have a whole herd like her. Mr. Goben owed James Kelly $120.00 for services and for pigs purchased from him. He could not pay Mr. Kelly but he told him he could have this cow. The cow was taken to the Kelly home early last March, and during the month of June following one of the older girls, Amy, complained of pains in her back. Dr. J. W. Martin was called and he pronounced the case tuberculosis. Dr. Martin, under date of July 26th, wrote as follows:

"There are five children sick, all of them running temperatures typical to this disease, enlarged glands, both cervical and axillary, etc."

The only two children who did not get the disease are the oldest and the baby. This oldest girl, Lenna, did not drink the cow's milk, neither did the nursing baby. Several of the children have sores on the body and two of them have scrofula indicated by sores on the scalp. This is caused by tuberculosis.

The cow was killed and showed lesions of generalized tuberculosis on post mortem. The carcass was condemned. The pig and the family cat were killed and both showed tubercular lesions.

You Get Pay.
Cattle found to be tubercular are not a total loss to the owner. They are appraised; their value determined. The state pays part of the appraised value. The United States government pays part. The carcass brings something, either for fertilizer or meat. The owner gets all this.

During August, 1924 the average appraisal in Michigan was $67.17.

A recent paper publishes the following:

Bovine Tuberculosis and Human Health.

Tuberculosis in man never can be controlled until bovine tuberculosis is eradicated. We should drink their milk, work with them, and catch tuberculosis from them. This alone is reason enough for cleaning up the disease in Illinois cattle.

Bovine tuberculosis, "consumption" caught from cattle, kills at least 70,000 people annually, or one-tenth of the more than 100,000 who die of tuberculosis in the United States. Dr. Ethan Allen Gray says about 16 per cent of tuberculosis in man is caused by the bovine bacilli. In child victims between five and eleven years, 25 per cent is from cows, and below five years 27 per cent. Of each million of our population 125.7 die of bovine tuberculosis annually. In Chicago more than 50 in each 100,000 inhabitants have the bovine type of tuberculosis.

The effect of bovine tuberculosis in man is the same as human tuberculosis. The germs may be inhaled, eaten, or absorbed through open scratches or breaks in the skin. They may be in the cow's breath, milk, excrements and discharges, body scales, and dust from the barn and pasture. They infect the human body in whatever form they come and however they gain entrance.

Milk is the chief carrier of tuberculosis germs from cows to men. Pasteurization kills disease germs in milk. Unpasteurized milk is not safe.

Tuberculin tested cows may be in the first or the last stages of the disease and not react to the test. Milk may be infected by being mixed with other milk. Infected dirt may fall from unwashed cows into the milk pail. Vessels not scalded may contain germs. Butter and cheese from infected milk will produce tuberculosis in those who eat it. Milk should be tested at once for tuberculosis germs when there is bowel trouble in the family.

"A considerable proportion of the tuberculosis affecting children is of bovine origin," says the British Royal Commission. Children drink milk; why shouldn't they have tuberculosis, if as Dr. Ethan Allen Gray believes, 10 per cent of our dairy cows are tubercular? Investigators report that 15 per cent of the cattle are tubercular in the immediate Chicago area. Others say 60 per cent. The germs are found in the milk, whatever part of the animal may be attacked by the disease. The bovine tuberculosis bacilli are to be dreaded, for they are more virulent than the human bacilli.

The farmer's own children are the first victims of his carelessness. Nearly all humped backs, crooked spines, and other deformities are caused by tuberculosis of the bones of children. Usually the tall, stooped, shouldered youth is a victim. Many of them break when the strains of life come between 16 and 25 years. Old-fashioned scrofula is tuberculosis of bones and skin. Dr. T. J. Williams calls attention to the prevalence of diseased glands of the head, throat and neck as the result of tuberculosis bacilli in the food finding access through sore tonsils.

Bovine tuberculosis may enter in other ways than by milk. A butcher scratches his hand on a meat hook; a laborer cleaning stock cars gets a silver in his hand; a farm hand eats a bit of salt from a cow lick; a little girl rubs cream on a sore spot; a boy lets a cow cough in his face; a farmer sweeps the barn without sprinkling and breathes the dust; raw cabbage or lettuce is eaten without washing after the cows break into the garden. Any of these may bring death by tuberculosis within three to twelve months.

Veterinary surgeons have gone to their death for their zeal in post-mortem examination of tuberculous cattle when they had but slight scratches on the hand. Even the skinning of a dead beast is a perilous operation.

The meat of tuberculous cattle and of the hogs that feed with them is safe for man only after most thorough cooking. Sausages smoked and not cooked should never be eaten. Who wants to eat meat that must pass through the fire before it is really dead?

Not only does the farmer make money by having his cattle tuberculin tested, he also makes life for himself and family, and for his neighbor who buys the milk and meat. If he refuses to test or to pasteurize, he loses money and may lose his life.

The Spirit of Protestantism

THE spirit of Protestantism exhibits itself in Love and Tolerance.

A true Protestant grants his fellow-citizen the right to differ as he himself claims that right.

Protestantism stands for certain definite principles, but it does not display intolerance towards those of opposite views.

A Protestant hopes that others may see as he does, but if they do not he still remains neighborly and fair. He does not resort to legislation to force his convictions upon others.

Protestantism is opposed to every type of tyranny over the minds and souls of men. It stands for freedom of conscience and religion. It stands for freedom of thought and speech. It stands for freedom to learn and teach.

It cannot agree to a dictatorship of religion or education without violating its traditional spirit.

It does not believe that the state should establish a monopoly in education.

All who believe in the true spirit of Protestantism will work and vote against the School Amendment, which seeks to give the state a monopoly in education.

Passion must not be permitted to destroy educational liberty, which is one of the best fruits of the Protestant Reformation.

THREE per cent of Michigan's population of ten years and over cannot read or write. The nation's average is twice as high - six per cent.

Thirty states have more illiterates than Michigan.

There are 2,203 negro and 14,172 native white illiterates in Michigan.

These are United States Census Bureau figures. They disprove the claims of propagandists that there are more than one-half million people in Michigan who cannot read or write.

Michigan people are broadminded, tolerant, and educated. They are products of schools that are second to none in America.

Public, Private, and Church Schools have worked together in a program of state-wide education. Each deserves credit for the part it has played.

If Michigan were to adopt the School Amendment, private and church schools would have to be closed in less than nine months! Nearly 125,000 pupils would be thrown into an already overcrowded public school system. Chaos would prevail. Work would be disorganized. System would be destroyed. Taxes would go up.

Many children would be put on a part time basis.

Frank Millikin of Beaver Creek was arrested Tuesday afternoon charged with violation of the prohibition law. The case arose out of an affair that took place last Saturday night when four boys and four school girls went to Beaver Creek town hall to attend a dance. On the way there they stopped at Millikins, says the application for search warrant, and obtained three pints of moonshine and got drunk. At the instigation of Supt. B. E. Smith an investigation was held at his office in the school house. The girls told where they obtained the liquor and a search warrant was issued for the premises of Frank Millikin. Officers Julius Jensen, Phillip Zalsman, Ben Yoder and Carl Jensen made the search and found a gallon jug of moonshine and a still. Millikin was arrested and a hearing held Wednesday, and it is reported that he made a signed confession of his guilt. He was bound over to Circuit court for trial, and released under $500 bonds.

Getting up Nights

Is One of Nature's Danger Signals. A Healthy Bladder Does Not Act At Night.

Irritation, excessive acidity or abnormal deposits may be the cause. It needs cleansing. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) acts on the kidneys and bladder as Epsom Salts on the bowels. R. D. Neblett, 10 Oak St., Battle Creek, Mich., says: "For three years had to get up three times at night. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) helped me in two days. I now do heavy work." It isn't a patent medicine. The formula is on the label. Sold by leading drug stores or Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at A. M. Lewis'.

THINK ABOUT IT.

Last week we read in the Avalanche amongst the locals "If I spend my dollar out of Grayling and you spend your dollar out of Grayling, and all the people spend their dollars out of Grayling what in thunder will become of Grayling? Think about it." Did you read it? Did you think about it? Did you come to the conclusion that it was all the same whether you or the merchant sent out the money? But you are all wrong if you think that way.

If you as a consumer, send away for your supplies you are paying a certain profit or markup to some outside concern which if spent in your home town, would put just that many more dollars in circulation at home. You may argue and say, "But suppose I send direct from the factory? Then I will buy at the factory price." But I tell you even then it will make a difference. The fact is that the manufacturers sell direct, then there is a bution expense because where manufacturers sell direct then there is a certain expense that must be paid for by the consumer. Suppose a farmer was to send out by parcel post everything he raised on his farm what would happen? He would have to keep a stenographer to answer correspondence and a shipping department to pack the hundreds of small shipments. In other words he would in the particular branch take the place of a grocer, but the service would have to be paid for just the same. You evidently see the point that there is always a distributing expense, that you must pay whether you buy from the home dealer or from an outside concern. It cannot be otherwise. I will take this opportunity to make mention of what Sorenson Bros. are doing to meet outside competition. We maintain a mail order department, and are offering to sell furniture on the factory-to-you plan and the advantages we offer by our plan we defy any outside concern to meet, and here is three of the principal reasons.

First: We can save you money because we are at less expense in a small town. Compare our prices and be convinced.

Second: The pleasure of doing business at home. If anything is wrong you will appreciate the convenience.

Third: The mutual benefit. What is good for your neighbor is good for you. If your town is prosperous, up goes the value of your real estate, a farm near a thriving town is worth considerable more than a farm in the wilderness.

Think about it.

J. W. Sorenson.
